The project spaces out a void, liberated from useful function. This volume is dedicated to the contemporary plastic experience. An architectural protocol influences our spatial perception :

- . Between the city and the gallery, a threshold invites and informs the visitor.
- . In the center, 3 successive cubes of 3 meters by side form the hypercube. This geometrical figure is to the cube what the cube is to the square, movement along the fourth dimension.
- . In the ceiling, 3 bright crosses draw diagonals. The repetition of the pattern fill the void in with an abstract whiteness.
- . Through doors aligned to the inner surface, office and storage are surreptitiously present.
- . Towards the front square, the passenger is disconnected from reality. In the other direction, he returns to reality changed by what he saw.

The place evolves with temporary events. Through the window, it questions the ideology of a neutral space: the sacred destination of the white cube.
